

"All the News
That's Fit to Print"

The New York Times

VOL. CLXXV ... No. 60,775

© 2026 The New York Times Company

SUNDAY, JANUARY 25, 2026

Prices in Canada may be higher

$6.00

Crowd-control munitions were deployed on protesters in Minneapolis after federal agents shot and killed a man there on Saturday.

After Maduro, They're Scared To Voice Hope

This article is by Tibisay Romero, Jack Nicas and Patricia Sulbarán.

BARCELONA, Venezuela — The boys were there for a water balloon fight.

It was an annual tradition to start Carnival celebrations in Barcelona, a working-class coastal city in Venezuela's east. But only two days after the capture of the nation's president, Nicolás Maduro, all of their shouting and laughing was not sitting well with the authorities.

Local police officers and National Guard soldiers arrived in force and, according to two of the boys and the relatives of four others, fired shots. The boys and young men — aged 13 to 25 — scattered, but the police arrested 25 of them. Two days later, state prosecutors filed charges.

Their crime? Treason.

"I'm going to screw you all over," one of the boys, 17, recalled a police officer telling him after his arrest, using an expletive. "You all support Donald Trump."

This past week, a reporter and a photographer from The New York Times visited the neighborhood where most of the detainees live and interviewed two of the boys and seven of their family members. Many of them, as well as other Venezuelans across the country, spoke on the condition of anonymity out of fear of reprisal from the government. Those interviews revealed that, under the Venezuelan interim government backed by the Trump administration, citizen surveillance and repression are alive and well.

President Trump has praised Venezuela's interim leadership as highly cooperative, particularly in opening up U.S. access to the country's oil. Those leaders, who

Continued on Page 8

At 79, Brazil's New Film Star 'Feels Like a Hug'

By ANA IONOVA

RIO DE JANEIRO — Even shielded by dark sunglasses, Tânia Maria de Medeiros Filha can't stop outside these days without fans fawning over her.

"Wherever I go, people recognize me," the 79-year-old actress said. "It's marvelous," she added. "But it hasn't gone to my head."

No, Ms. Medeiros doesn't have

Data From Children Misused for 'Race Science'

By MIKE MCINTIRE

Genetic researchers were seeking children for an ambitious, federally funded project to track brain development — a study that they told families could yield invaluable discoveries about DNA's impact on behavior and disease.

They also promised that the children's sensitive data would be closely guarded in the decade-long study, which got underway in 2015. Promotional materials included a cartoon of a Black child saying it felt good knowing that "scientists are taking steps to keep my information safe."

The scientists did not keep it safe.

A group of fringe researchers thwarted safeguards at the Na-

Researchers Thwarted N.I.H. Safeguards for Brain Study

tional Institutes of Health and gained access to data from thousands of children. The researchers have used it to produce at least 16 papers purporting to find biological evidence for differences in intelligence between races, ranking ethnicities by I.Q. scores and suggesting that Black people earn less because they are not very smart.

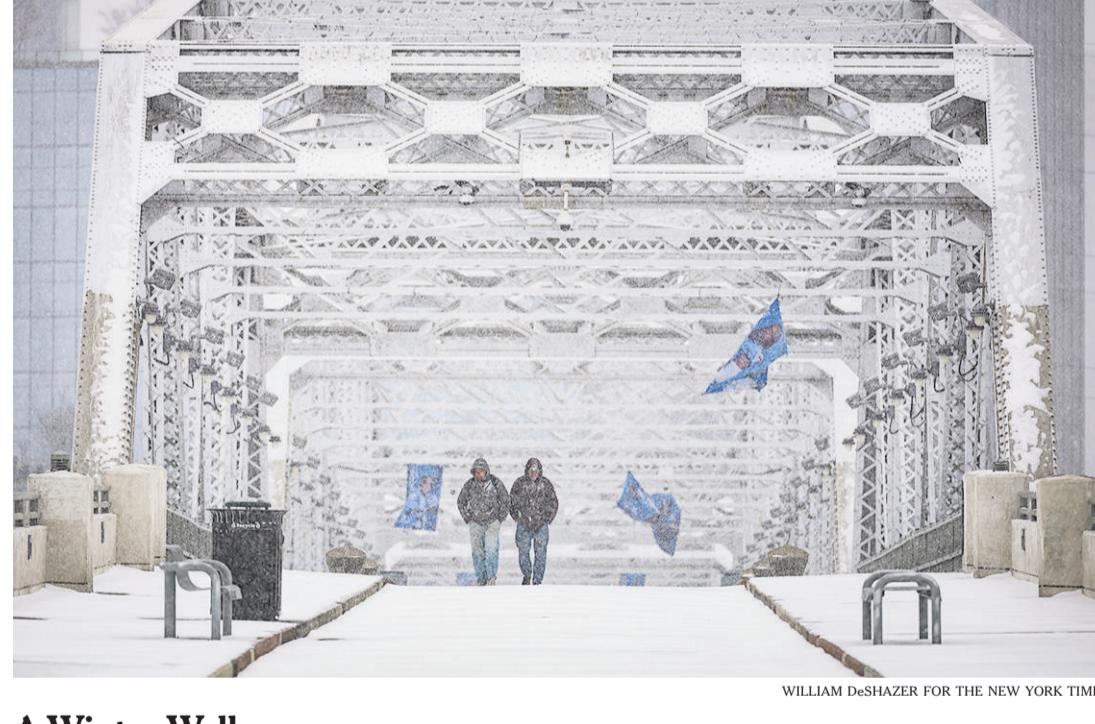

Mainstream geneticists have rejected their work as biased and unscientific. Yet by relying on genetic and other personal data from the prominent project, known as the Adolescent Brain Cognitive Development Study, the researchers gave their theories an air of analytical rigor.

Members of the research group were ineligible to obtain data from the ABCD project. But one of them gained access through an American professor who was already being investigated by the N.I.H. over his handling of another child brain study.

Their papers have provided fodder for racist posts on social media and white nationalist message boards that have been viewed millions of times. Some of the papers are cited by A.I. bots like ChatGPT and Grok in response to ge-

Continued on Page 14

A Wintry Walk

A bridge in Nashville on Saturday. A fierce storm put most of the country in a deep freeze. Page 13.

U.S. AGENTS, FIRING 10 SHOTS, KILL MAN, BRINGING CLASHES

Videos Seem to Counter Federal Account of a Struggle in Minneapolis

This article is by Ernesto Londoño, Devon Lum, Hamed Aleaziz and Mitch Smith.

MINNEAPOLIS — Federal agents shot and killed a 37-year-old Minneapolis resident on Saturday, prompting renewed protests and clashes in a city where tensions have reached a breaking point after weeks of aggressive federal immigration enforcement.

Videos analyzed by The New York Times appeared to contradict the accounts of federal officials, who said the man, identified by a senior law enforcement official as Alex J. Pretti, approached Border Patrol agents with a handgun and the intent to "massacre" them.

The video footage shows the confrontation apparently began when Mr. Pretti stepped between a woman and an agent who was pepper spraying her. Other agents then pepper sprayed Mr. Pretti, who was holding a phone in one hand and nothing in the other, and pulled him to the ground. His concealed weapon was found only after agents restrained and took Mr. Pretti to the ground.

Then at least at least 10 shots appeared to have been fired at him by the agents within five seconds, according to the Times analysis of verified videos posted to social media. Chief Brian O'Hara of the Minneapolis police said investigators believe that at least two agents opened fire.

A U.S. official said that the Department of Homeland Security was investigating the shooting with the assistance of the F.B.I. Federal officials have so far stymied attempts by Minnesota law enforcement officers to investigate the encounter.

Chief O'Hara said the shooting victim was an American citizen with no known criminal record, and had a valid firearms permit. Open carry is legal in Minnesota.

The shooting followed weeks of angry, often violent clashes between local protesters and federal agents after President Trump turned the focus of his immigration crackdown on the liberal-dominated city. In a news conference, Mayor Jacob Frey accused the Trump administration of terrorizing Minneapolis. "How many more Americans need to die or get badly hurt for this operation to end?" he asked.

At least two other people have been shot by federal law enforcement agents in Minneapolis this month, including Renee Good, 37, who was killed by an Immigration and Customs Enforcement agent

Continued on Page 17

Trump Rekindles U.S. Fixation On Greenland Born in 1940s

By MICHAEL CROWLEY

WASHINGTON — The last Nazis on Greenland were captured in October 1944, when American soldiers raided a hidden German weather station on the island's desolate east coast and took dozens of prisoners. Within a year, Germany would be defeated and World War II would be over.

But 80 years of both tension and cooperation between Denmark and the United States over Greenland was just beginning — culminating in President Trump's current obsession with acquiring the Arctic island.

While the story begins with World War II, it was shaped by the Cold War that followed, in which the United States transformed barren Greenland into a major military asset, populating it with air bases, towering radar sites and even a never-completed underground bunker complex meant to house nuclear missiles.

It was all possible under an agreement with Denmark that granted the United States nearly unlimited military freedom on the island, one that remains in force today.

"We did it before, we can do it again," said Daniel Fried, a former senior State Department official who worked on Soviet issues in the 1980s.

Whether Mr. Trump understands this history has been a mystery as European leaders try to convince him to drop his insistence on owning the island. He said on Wednesday that a "framework" for a deal had been reached,

Continued on Page 10

SECURITY Officials say they are unaware of any intelligence that shows China and Russia are endangering the island. PAGE 11

A RED LINE National sovereignty is a core tenet of Europe that Russian and U.S. land grabs could jeopardize. Europeans have resisted. PAGE 10

U.S. ARMY, VIA GETTY IMAGES

The Cold War brought U.S. military projects to Greenland.

U.S. ARMY, VIA GETTY IMAGES

At 79, Brazil's New Film Star 'Feels Like a Hug'

a decades-long career as a leading lady of Brazilian cinema. In fact, she has just a few credits to her name, some of them as an extra. Before setting foot on a film set for the very first time a few years ago, she spent her days weaving rugs in her sleepy hometown in Brazil's northeast.

Now, Tânia Maria, as she is commonly known, is causing a major cinematic stir at home and abroad with a show-stealing performance in Brazil's latest buzzworthy film, "The Secret Agent."

With a modest but captivating 11 minutes onscreen, Tânia Maria has drawn praise from international film critics, grabbed newspaper headlines and amassed more than 100,000 followers on social media in just months. And the movie that has catapulted her to

Continued on Page 9

When Betting Taints Sports, Do the Fans Care?

By TANIA GANGULI

When the podcaster Van Lathan heard about the sports-betting and poker indictments that ensnared two active N.B.A. figures last fall, it didn't make him want to stop watching the N.B.A.

In fact, just the opposite. Mr. Lathan, who hosts shows about sports and culture on The Ringer, previously had little interest in the Portland Trail Blazers. But when the team's head coach, Chauncey Billups, was arrested by the F.B.I. on the second day of the N.B.A. season and accused of working with the Mafia, Mr. Lathan wanted to know how the team would react. So he tuned in that night.

He wasn't alone. In the days after the arrests, the N.B.A. had its most-watched opening week since 2017. Viewership the night the F.B.I. held its news conference was 60 percent higher than for the previous year. The league announced Mr. Billups and Terry Rozier, the player involved, had been placed on leave, and then resumed promoting its new season.

"Nothing affected the games," said Mr. Lathan, who argues that sports fans, particularly N.B.A.

Continued on Page 24

INTERNATIONAL 4-11

Iran's Faltering Theocracy

The massacre of protesters offers hints about growing tensions inside the ruling system as the supreme leader's rule comes under strain.

PAGE 4

An Unlikely Source of Crypto

The Taliban are suspicious of the internet, but a start-up in Afghanistan is building tools to transform aid.

PAGE 7

METROPOLITAN

The Rising Stars of Sobriety

A generation of influencers at a members-only club is rejecting alcohol, but not giving up the party.

PAGE 1

SPECIAL SECTION

52 Places to Go in 2026

Our travel suggestions include Vietnam, above, a Tanzanian conservation area and Winnie-the-Pooh's England.

PAGE 1

SUNDAY STYLES

Not Quite as Nature Intended

Fashion has begun exaggerating, or distorting, the female form as never before. What's behind this new brand of body modification?

PAGE 7

A.I. as a Way to Heaven?

A religious fervor has been sweeping up some users of our newest and most powerful technologies.

PAGE 1

ARTS & LEISURE

The Big Man on 'Bridgerton'

Luke Thompson is assuming the lead in the show, and he's bringing Shakespearean depth with him.

PAGE 10

SPORTS 21-24

Rams Coach's Evolution

Sean McVay, who has the most playoff wins of any N.F.L. coach before their 40th birthday, has led his team to the N.F.C. championship game.

PAGE 23

SUNDAY OPINION

Carlos Lozada

PAGE 9

SUNDAY BUSINESS

Making a Living by Wagering

Their job is betting on prediction markets, and some are making fortunes by betting on political or weather events or whether President Trump will say certain words.

PAGE 4

Sudden Stop in Their Careers

As employment among Black female professionals continues to drop, many of them are turning to each other to vent, give pep talks, provide advice and share job updates.

PAGE 1

