"All the News That's Fit to Print"

The New York Times

Today, very windy, mix of clouds and sunshine, high 56. Tonight, clear, remaining windy, low 48. Tomorrow, sunshine and a few clouds, breezy, which is the sunshine and the sunshine and the sunshine and the sunshine and the sunshine are sunshine and the sunshine and the sunshine are sunshine and the sunshine are sunshine are sunshine are sunshine are sunshine are sunshine and the sunshine are sunshin high 57. Weather map, Page A26.

Prices in Canada may be higher

THE WEATHER

VOL. CLXXV .... No. 60,689

© 2025 The New York Times Company

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 2025

NEWS ANALYSIS China's Win: Allowing U.S. To Claim One

As Trump Pumps Fist, Beijing's Grip Tightens

> By LILY KUO and DAVID PIERSON

TAIPEI, Taiwan — When Xi Jinping walked out of his meeting with President Trump on Thursday, he projected the confidence of a powerful leader who could make Washington blink.

The outcome of the talks suggested that he succeeded.

By flexing China's near monopoly on rare earths and its purchasing power over U.S. soybeans, Mr. Xi won key concessions from Washington — a reduction in tariffs, a suspension of port fees on Chinese ships and the delay of U.S. export controls that would have barred more Chinese firms from access to American technology. Both sides also agreed to extend a truce struck earlier this year to limit

"What's clear is they have become increasingly bold in exerting leverage and they are happy to pocket any and all U.S. concessions," said Julian Gewirtz, who was a senior China policy official at the White House and the State Department in President Joseph R. Biden Jr.'s administration.

Sounding almost as if he were delivering a lecture, Mr. Xi said to Mr. Trump that the "recent twists and turns" of the trade war should be instructive to them both, according to a Chinese government summary of Mr. Xi's remarks at the meeting in Busan, South Korea.

"Both sides should consider the bigger picture and focus on the long-term benefits of cooperation, rather than falling into a vicious cycle of mutual retaliation," Mr. Xi said.

By twists and turns, Mr. Xi was most likely referring to the last several months, or nearly a year, of tit-for-tat retaliatory

Continued on Page A9

TRUCE ON TRADE BY TRUMP AND XI ASSUAGES WORRY

$4.00

STABILIZING ECONOMIES

But Plan to Resume U.S. Nuclear Tests Wakens Proliferation Fears

> By KATIE ROGERS and ERICA L. GREEN

Ahead of the high-stakes meeting between President Trump and Xi Jinping of China on Thursday, world leaders were hoping for news of an economic truce that could help stabilize the global economy. They got it.

They got something extra, as well: intensified concerns about whether the world is entering a new era of nuclear weapons proliferation among global powers.

After a 90-minute face to face meeting in South Korea, Mr. Trump announced that the two leaders had sharply de-escalated their trade standoff, agreeing, in essence, on a yearlong cease-fire that would roll back tit-for-tat measures including steep tariffs and shutting off access to rare earth metals. [Page B1.]

The meeting was the most anticipated and consequential event of Mr. Trump's nearly weeklong tour through Asia, where he engaged in a series of trade and security agreements with other countries in the region, many of them geared toward containing

"I guess on the scale from 0 to 10, with 10 being the best, I would say the meeting was a 12," Mr. Trump said aboard Air Force One as he returned to Washington.

The agreement was a win for the world economy, but was brokered under the shadow of a new and sudden amplification of nuclear threats between global powers.

Just minutes before he landed in Busan, South Korea, to meet with Mr. Xi, Mr. Trump announced on social media that the United States would immediately restart nuclear weapons testing after a

Continued on Page A9

SILVIA IZOUIERDO/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Over 130 Dead in Rio de Janeiro Drug Raids

Bodies were laid out in a street this week after the deadliest crackdown on organized crime in the city's violent history. Page A8.

Utah's Proposal for Homeless: Forced Move to Remote Camp

By ELLEN BARRY and JASON DePARLE

SALT LAKE CITY — To glimpse the future of homelessness policy in the age of President Trump, consider 16 acres of scrubby pasture on the outskirts of Salt Lake City where the state plans to place as many as 1,300 homeless people in what supporters call a services campus and critics deem a detention camp.

State planners say the site, announced last month after a secretive search, will treat addiction and mental illness and provide a humane alternative to the streets, where afflictions often go untreated and people die at alarming

They also vow stern measures to move homeless people to the remote site and force many of them to undergo treatment, reflecting a nationwide push by some conservatives for a new approach to homelessness, one embraced and promoted by Mr. Trump.

With outdoor sleeping banned, removal to the edge of town may become the only way some homeless Utahns can avoid jail. Planners say the facility will also hold hundreds of mentally ill homeless people under court-ordered civil commitment and the effort will include an "accountability center" for those with addictions.

Effort Mirrors Trump Vow of 'Tent Cities' With Services

"An accountability center is involuntary, OK - you're not coming in and out," Randy Shumway, chairman of the state Homeless Services Board, said in an interview. Utah will end a harmful "culture of permissiveness," he said, and guide homeless people "towards human thriving."

While the Utah effort began before Mr. Trump returned to office, it mirrors his pledge to move the homeless from urban cores to "tent cities" with services. And it accelerated after Mr. Trump issued an executive order in July,

Continued on Page A18

Older New Yorkers Face Losing Food Stamps, and Tough Choices

By ANNA KODÉ

Every year around this time, Sandra Bullaro is usually busy starting to prepare for family gatherings as the holiday season begins. "I'm Italian," said Ms. Bullaro. "We have big families. We usually have beautiful holidays." But this year, she said, "we're not having that."

Ms. Bullaro, 70, is one of the roughly three million New Yorkers who rely on food stamps, which will lose federal funding on Saturday amid the government shutdown. Gov. Kathy Hochul on

More on the White House

WRONGLY DEPORTED A former worker at a Trump golf club was returned to Mexico. PAGE A17

SANCTIONS LIFTED Trump allies lobbied for the relief for a Putinbacked nationalist. PAGE A10

BOAT STRIKE The U.S. said it killed four accused of smuggling drugs in the Pacific. PAGE All

Accessibility of Pantries Among Challenges

Thursday declared a state of emergency because of the looming cutoff and promised more than $100 million in state funding to help fill the gap.

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, better known as SNAP or food stamps, provides about $650 million in benefits to New Yorkers each month. More

Continued on Page A16

Dutch Voters Hit Brake on Far-Right Momentum

This article is by Jeanna Smialek, Claire Moses and Koba Ryckewaert.

Dutch voters rebuked a farright party in national elections this week after it had caused months of political upheaval, and they unexpectedly threw support to a center-left party that ran on promises of stability and hope.

That sudden reorientation is

NEWS ANALYSIS

likely to usher in a more centrist government in the Netherlands, which says something about the state of not only Dutch politics but of populism in Europe more broadly. It shows that the far right, even in a place where it had seemed to be on an inexorable march toward greater power, is capable of hitting a roadblock. "We thought it was almost a deterministic thing, that the radical right was always going to become bigger — that they were bulletproof," said Kristof Jacobs, a political scientist at Radboud University near the German border. "Not so bulletproof after all.

On Thursday, official counts Continued on Page A6

Devastation in Jamaican Port Town Hurricane Melissa left at least two dead in Black River, and its historic buildings in ruin. Page A8.

PREVIOUS PACKAGING MILK CHOCOLATE

COCONUT & ALMOND CHOCOLATE CANDY BAR

NEW PACKAGING

The packaging has been reworded to include the phrase "chocolate candy."

By CLAIRE BROWN

Almost no one noticed when, sometime over the last few years, the packaging on Almond Joy, Mr. Goodbar and Rolo was updated to remove the words "milk choco-

The edits were easy to miss: The description on the front of Mr. Goodbar wrapper changed from "milk chocolate

Candy Recipes Adjust to a Warming World

'Chocolatey'? It May Not Mean What You Think.

with peanuts" to "chocolate candy with peanuts." Almond Joy is now marketed as a "coconut and almond chocolate candy bar." Rolos are now wrapped in "rich chocolate candy" instead of "milk chocolate."

I realized this earlier this year after eating a disappointing chocolate bar. It wasn't spoiled, it just didn't taste the way I remembered. As a reporter who covers the climate, I'd read about global warming contributing to drought in West Africa and sending cocoa prices through the roof, and I knew candy companies had

Continued on Page A14

INTERNATIONAL A4-12

Footage of Hamas's Duplicity The Times reviewed a nearly 15-minute drone video released by Israel's military that it said showed that the discovery of a deceased captive was staged. PAGE A12

5 More Arrests in Louvre Heist

A total of seven suspects, one of whom is believed to have been among the thieves at the scene, have been detained. The jewels have not been recovered. PAGE A6

A Prince No More

Andrew, the disgraced brother of King Charles III, will be stripped of his royal title over his ties to the convicted sexual predator Jeffrey Epstein.

NATIONAL A13-23, 26

Mississippi Democrats Hopeful The state is holding seven special elections after a judge said the G.O.P. had diluted Black voter strength. PAGE A15

Halloween All Year Round

A shop in Lower Manhattan has long been a place where customers and workers can play dress-up.

BUSINESS B1-5 Nvidia Hits $5 Trillion Value

The chip maker has become a linchpin in the Trump administration's trade negotiations in Asia as the company consolidates power in the artificial intelligence boom.

VW Reports $1.5 Billion Loss Europe's largest automaker faulted President Trump's high tariffs for the third-quarter hit and said a shortage of semiconductor chips could further hurt the company's productivity. PAGE B4

OPINION A24-25 The Choice

SPORTS B6-9

A World Series Surprise Vladimir Guerrero Jr. and the Toronto

Blue Jays are one win away from the team's first title in 32 years.

What's Wrong This Time?

Florida State, 2-10 a year ago, raised hopes by winning its first three games. Now it can't beat anyone.

The father of French Impressionism did not want to go to Venice. He eventually changed his mind, and a blockbuster exhibition in Brooklyn shows some of the exhilarating results.

Frayed Nerves and Covid-19

The playwright Samuel D. Hunter makes his Broadway debut with "Little Bear Ridge Road," set in Idaho during the pandemic and its aftermath. PAGE C1

