"All the News That's Fit to Print"

The New York Times

THE WEATHER
Today, sunshine and a few clouds, a shower from midday on, high 79. Tonight, partly cloudy, low 58. Tomorrow, mostly sunny, less humid, high 64. Weather map, Page B12.

VOL. CLXXVI .... No. 61,037 © 2026 The New York Times Company WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 2026 Prices in Canada may be higher $4.00

ANDRES KUDACKI FOR THE NEW YORK TIMES

Disruptions as Bridge Nears Completion
NJ Transit and Amtrak began the final phase of a project to replace the Portal Bridge, forcing detours and delays for riders. Page A17.

Eyeing 'Reset,' Cornell Limits Its Fraternities

A Pause on Parties, and Beefed-Up Staffing

By SHARON OTTERMAN and DEBRA KAMIN

Cornell University has banned parties at fraternity houses for the rest of the academic year and will add experienced sexual assault investigators to work with its police force in response to a student's allegations of gang rape in October 2024.

The university announced the changes on Tuesday as it tried to reassure students, faculty and alumni that it is addressing the crisis set off several weeks ago by the lawsuit filed by a former undergraduate, known as Jane Doe.

"We must meet this moment by acknowledging where we have fallen short and taking meaningful action," Michael I. Kotlikoff, the president of Cornell, announced in a letter to the campus on Tuesday. "Cornell must be a place where safety is not an open question."

The lawsuit shocked the campus and nation not only because of its allegations of rape, but also because it put on full display how fraternity members exchanged Snapchat messages using crude and dehumanizing language to describe the woman and what was taking place.

The announcement on Tuesday aims to also address the social culture at Cornell that set the stage for the suspected assault, Dr. Kotlikoff said.

"I am deeply sorry for the harm Jane Doe suffered in 2024, and appalled that this act of sexual violence occurred within our Cornell community," he said.

The most immediate change is a ban on all parties and social events in fraternity houses at Cornell for the remainder of the academic year, a sweeping measure on a campus where one-third of students are part of Greek life. Dr. Kotlikoff, in an interview on Tuesday, noted that since the pandemic, fraternity parties had been pushed even more to the center of student life.

"There is an issue, post-Covid, of what are the options for students in a town like Ithaca," he said. "Many, many bars and venues went out of business and did not come back."

The moratorium, which comes days before homecoming weekend, will allow for a thorough review of fraternity life at Cornell to determine whether it can safely resume, Dr. Kotlikoff said.

"This is a step that we need to take at this point in time to force a reset," said Anne Smalling, the chair of Cornell's board of trustees, in an interview. "It's incumbent on us to try and find other ways for these kids to engage in social settings."

The campus will also enhance support for survivors of sexual as-

Continued on Page A17

DAMAGING CLAIMS FORCE GUILFOYLE TO EXIT AS ENVOY

ACCUSATION BY DONOR

Remarkable Rise and Fall for Former Fiancée of Trump Jr.

By TYLER PAGER

Kimberly Guilfoyle resigned as the U.S. ambassador to Greece on Tuesday after the White House asked her to do so following a string of damaging reports, including that she had asked a Republican donor to pay off her credit card.

In response to a question from a reporter about Ms. Guilfoyle's status, President Trump's new press secretary, Katie Zacharia, said: "We have asked Ambassador Guilfoyle to resign. She has been a wonderful asset to the team, and we wish her well."

Mr. Trump said Tuesday that Ms. Guilfoyle "was doing a good job" but that he "didn't like what I read." The president also downplayed his connection to Ms. Guilfoyle, who was once engaged to his oldest son, Donald Trump Jr.

"She wasn't a member of my family," he told reporters before

DOUG MILLS/THE NEW YORK TIMES

Kimberly Guilfoyle said she'd "vigorously defend" herself.

leaving the White House for Alaska. "She, I guess, dated my son a long time ago."

In a lengthy post on social media, Ms. Guilfoyle said that her time as ambassador was "coming to an end" and that she planned to "vigorously defend my name, my reputation, and my integrity."

"I will not allow false accusations to define my decades of public service," she wrote.

A donor, Eric Deters, first told The Wall Street Journal that Ms. Guilfoyle asked him to wire $100,000 to pay off her American Express card just before her Senate confirmation hearing in July 2025. Ms. Guilfoyle promised to help connect Mr. Deters to Trump administration officials who could help him on tax and legal matters, he told The Journal.

According to screenshots of

Continued on Page A11

Cancer Found At Early Stage On Leo's Lung

By ELISABETTA POVOLEDO

VATICAN CITY — Pope Leo was diagnosed with lung cancer on Tuesday, and a lower lobe of his right lung was removed during surgery, the Vatican said in a statement.

It said an examination of a nodule during the operation had confirmed a diagnosis of lung adenocarcinoma. It said cancer had been "suspected by preoperative tests."

The operation itself lasted about 90 minutes, and the pope, 71, was in the operating room for about three hours.

"The surgery was successful, and there were no complications," the statement said.

The statement did not say whether the pope would undergo further treatment. A Vatican spokesman said that the statement spoke for itself.

Lung adenocarcinoma is a common form of lung cancer. Survival rates for it vary greatly depending on the stage of the cancer and a patient's overall health.

The information released about Leo seems to indicate he has early-stage lung cancer, which is typically treated with surgery and tends to have a very high survival rate, said Dr. Sudish Murthy, a thoracic surgeon at the Cleveland Clinic.

The surgery was performed at a hospital in Rome, the Policlinico A. Gemelli. The Vatican had said previously that Leo was expected to spend about a week recovering in the hospital after the surgery and that all audiences with him would be canceled until Oct. 20.

The cancer diagnosis came about a year and a half into Leo's papacy. The first American pope, he was elected to lead the Roman Catholic Church in May 2025.

The pope announced during his

Continued on Page A9

Oct. 7 Attack Changed Israel, but Not Its Politics

Near Gaza, Sharp Split Over Netanyahu as Election Looms

By ISABEL KERSHNER

SDEROT, Israel — For one day last week, much of Israel united to commemorate the anniversary of the deadliest attack in the country's history.

But when Israelis head to the ballot box this month, they will be carrying sharply disparate versions of who is to blame for failing to prevent the Hamas-led assault on Oct. 7, 2023. Though the attack traumatized Israel, it did not produce the kind of rage that would create a political transformation, leaving the country more polarized than ever.

The political divide is nowhere clearer than among the Israelis living closest to the Gaza border, where thousands of gunmen overran communities, army bases and a music festival.

In Nahal Oz, a pastoral kibbutz half a mile from the border, the gardens are blooming again with the return of residents evacuated during the war. Many in this liberal bastion are likely to vote against Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and his hawkish policies, holding him responsible for failures leading to Oct. 7, said Daniel Rahamim, 72, a spokesman for the community, who survived the assault along with his family.

"We don't have the privilege of giving up on peace," he said.

Continued on Page A5

DAVID BARRETT

Moving On Up to the West Side
A family of barn owls has made a Manhattan water tower home, captivating neighbors. Page A16.

Often 'Nay' on Trump Agenda, Collins Rarely Affects Outcome

This article is by Michael Gold, Catie Edmondson and Andrea Fuller.

WASHINGTON — It was approaching midnight on the Senate floor, and a vote that had been meant to last 15 minutes had dragged on for nearly three hours as Senator Susan Collins, Republican of Maine, weighed whether to kill one of President Trump's top priorities.

It was hardly the first time she had faced such a choice.

Throughout Mr. Trump's two terms, Ms. Collins had frequently criticized the president and voted against his initiatives more often than anyone else in her party. She cherished her reputation as one of the few remaining independent-minded Republicans in the Senate, which helped explain her enduring popularity in her purple home state. Yet she had more rarely blocked the president's agenda outright.

On that night last summer, Ms. Collins had the chance to do so. The senator, the chairwoman of the committee that controls federal spending, was deeply opposed to a bill Mr. Trump had demanded to cancel $9 billion in foreign aid and public broadcasting money that Congress had approved.

She had prepared an amendment to shield the Corporation for Public Broadcasting from the

Continued on Page A12

Scottish Sailor's Grave, Forgotten for 200 Years, Now Has Name

By MALIA MENDEZ

MYSTIC, Conn. — Jon Fuller kept thinking about the fallen sailor. He had just a rough sketch of the man — a crewman on a British ship, killed by a troop of scheming Yankees on the coast of Connecticut during the War of 1812, and buried in an unmarked grave. But the man's name was lost to history.

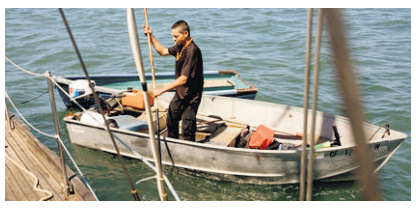

"I was very curious," Fuller said. "I was wondering who he was. Did he have a family? What was his history?"

Fuller, 66, works in retirement planning at a financial services firm. His Massachusetts home is cluttered with shells and cannonballs of various diameters, mostly from the Civil War, bought in antique shops or on eBay. He keeps one cannon under a table in the living room, and another by the front door. His prized swords are stored in an umbrella stand. He's dabbled in re-enacting — wearing a replica uniform from the French and Indian War — but had to stop after getting heat stroke at a recent event.

He also has a family home in Groton Long Point, Conn., less than a mile away from the beach where the unknown sailor had died.

So when Fuller ran across an ar-

Continued on Page A16

NATIONAL A10-17, 20

Everybody Out of the Bay
A few holdouts remained in a boat community by San Francisco as a deadline loomed to leave the water. PAGE A10

Insurer Rates Hitting Home
The rising price of policy premiums for homeowners is driving midterm races across the country. PAGE A14

INTERNATIONAL A4-9

A Great Deal for Putin
Offering no concessions, Russia has gained sanctions relief and put heat on Ukraine. News Analysis. PAGE A8

Macron's Dashed Hopes
Rather than the revival he sought, the French leader's tenure seems to be ending in crisis. News Analysis. PAGE A9

BUSINESS B1-6

Please Pass the Cookies
What would artificial intelligence agents talk about at a no-humans-allowed dinner party? Some techies decided to find out. PAGE B1

ARTS C1-6

The Kodak 'Odyssey'
The movie was made with film manufactured in a factory in western New York. Above, film containers. PAGE C5

Jailed for a Joke
Facing 19 months in prison, the Turkish comic Deniz Goktas delivered a passionate defense of free speech. PAGE C1

OBITUARIES B11

Key 'Breaking Bad' Character
RJ Mitte mined his experience of living with cerebral palsy in playing the role of Walter White's son on the Emmy-winning show. He was 34.

SPORTS B7-10, 12

Captain of the Brew Crew
Christian Yelich joined Milwaukee at his peak nearly a decade ago, and he has been the constant during the franchise's long run of success. PAGE B7

OPINION A18-19

David French PAGE A18

FOOD D1-8

Historically Tasty
For history buffs, heirloom apples provide a link to the past. Cooks prize them for the textures and flavors that often outmatch the usual options. PAGE D7

0 354613 9